SECURITY MARKET IS STRENGTHENED

Clearing Out of Weak Accounts
Helps and Swift Rally Should Soon Take Place.

HARVESTS FORTIFY THE U. S.

New York, Oct. 12.—Security markets in America and Europe entered the new week strengthened in technical position by the clearing out of weak accounts. Something of a short interest has been created, and the tone should be reflected in a swift rally on the slightest favorable development. The harvests in Europe have been bad, and following poor crops the previous year have naturally resulted in war, for war always follows a bad crop. There are a few exceptions to this, of course, but thousands of years of history prove that political agitation is mild when crops are good, and, therefore, conditions in the United States should improve both socially as well as financially the next few years.

The tremendous crop of this year is, of course, of vital importance to Wall Street, but it is equally important to the farmer in mind the fact that soil conditions are such as to justify the expectation of equally large crops in 1932. This fact has an important bearing on investments.

United States Strongly Fortified.

Much ado has been made recently over the selling of American stocks by Europe. It is said as many as 200,000 shares have been sold in the past two weeks. Even admitting that a big war can take place in Europe, not more than a million shares of stocks would be offered for sale, and that would mean scarcely $1,000,000,000. It would take less than 100,000,000 bushels of corn to pay the bill, and the corn crop in the United States this year is 5,000,000,000 bushels greater than it was last year, not to count about 500,000,000 bushels more of oats, 100,000,000 more of potatoes and 25,000,000 tons more of hay with other crops with the same proportion. About all that Europe would accomplish by selling a million shares of American stocks would be to check the shipment of gold from London to New York. The position of the United States was never so strong financially and in a business way since it had an export business. It is just emerging from years of panic. There is almost complete absence of speculation, not only in stocks, but in all lines of business. Savings are at a high record and ownership of stocks on margin is at a low record.

W. W. FINLEY FAVORS BETTER WATERWAYS

Many Plan to Attend Rivers and Harbors Congress to Be Held Here.

The coming National Convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, which will be held in this city, December 4 to 6, gives promise of bringing together the largest number of delegates that ever attended a waterway congress. President Taft will open the convention with a notable address on the needs of waterway improvements and will be followed by a number of leading men of both the United States and Canada.

It is a subject for general congratulation, according to former Congressman J. Adam Bede, that the several water and levee conventions held up to the present time have been largely attended than at any time in the history of the associations.

Orders Placed for Awards In Herald's Big Contest

Advocate Announces that Prizes Are Arriving in City Rapidly, and that Complete List Is to Be Announced in Near Future.

Orders have been placed for all of the 250 awards to be awarded winners in The Washington Herald's $25,000 contest. Announcement to this effect was made last night by The Advocate, the dapper little gentleman in charge of the competition. The selection of the articles was completed more than a week ago, and steps were taken immediately to order the awards.

Many of the articles already have reached the city from the various factories. The remaining ones are expected to arrive this week. The Advocate has devised a most unique means of displaying the details of his plan, but intimates that it is unusual. From what can be gathered by reporters, the plan consists of displaying the 250 articles in a building in the downtown section of the city. This is merely a surmise, however, and nothing definite can be stated.

List Carefully Selected.

The Advocate spent a long time in selecting the awards, so that he might pick out articles which would appeal to the greatest number of contestants. A complete list of the articles will be printed as soon as all of them have arrived in the city. The Advocate is withholding the list, for the reason that there is possibility that some hitch in shipping will be experienced and that it will be necessary to make slight changes in the articles.

The leading articles will be a $5,000 house and lot in one of Washington's residential sections, four $1,250 touring cars of the latest models, four $750 Baby Grand pianos, four $250 player pianos, and four $500 upright pianos.

The house and lot is considered as a grand award and will go to the contestant obtaining the greatest number of votes, irrespective of the limitations of contest districts. The remaining awards are to be divided equally among the four contest districts. This is for the purpose of equalizing the distribution of the valuable awards. There will be virtually four sets of awards, and the contest, therefore, is almost equivalent to four separate competitions.

Same Awards for Each District.

Contestants are eligible to receive only those awards offered to their district. Each district is to have a similar set of awards, so there will be no discrimination. The district limitations refer only to the distribution of awards, and in no wise affect the obtaining of votes. Contestants will be given votes at all establishments advertised in connection with the competition, irrespective of whether or not the store is located in the contestant's district.

Great interest is being displayed in the contest. More than 200 retail merchants and manufacturers are advertising in connection with it. Others are realizing the advantages to be derived from joining the race daily and are sending in their advertisements. The number of contestants also is increasing. It is never too late to enter, so far as The Advocate is concerned. Contestants, however, should enter early. Every day of delay means a serious handicap.

The competition is open to all readers of The Washington Herald residing or working in the District. The contest is the embodiment of simplicity, and any one with determination can win. Success is dependent upon industriousness and alertness. Those contestants who apply themselves to the business of getting votes will be among the winners at the finish of the six-month race next February.

Strange Wedding Ceremony.

From "Tripoli, the Mysterious," by Mabel Loomis Todd.

The bride walked impressively to the middle of the courtyard, where the mirror was held close to the cushion and its basket. Stepping between, she seated herself in the basket facing the mirror, her attendants adjusting the barracan for her greater comfort, and, once seated, jumping her gently up and down on the yielding leaves. The henna was picked up in handfuls by her friends, passed over her, given into her hands under her draperies, and put entirely over and about her. Pressing her face close to the mirror, she opened the barracan to gaze at her reflection while her friends spread their own draperies out as a shield, that by no chance could a glimpse of her face be caught from any angle.

This part of the ceremony savored greatly of mystery, and was evidently symbolic. No Mohammedan woman with whom I talked, no matter how friendly, was long the acquaintance, was ever willing to explain this performance. All seemed to regard it as too sacred for casual discussion, and always changed the subject if I broached it.

The bride's father had had the four regulation (i. e., permitted) wives, and was once the proud parent of over fifty children, but only about fourteen had lived beyond babyhood; a small family for Mohammedan Tripoli, as he easily told me.
